The Supreme Court of Georgia has decided that cotton future notes are absolutely void and cannot be collected by law.

The publication of the pension list has disclosed the fact that pensioners have been paid long after the pensioners were dead.

The increase of live stock is not equal to the increase of population. Since 1868 the population of the United States has increased 65 per cent., while the increase in live stock has been about 50 per cent.

Is a desperate hand-to-hand encounter at Lancaster, Judge George Denny, Jr., shot and killed James H. Anderson. The latter, it appears, was the aggressor. Denny is a prominent Republican politician and is now an applicant for a United States District Judgeship in Dakota.

A novel idea in the way of compulsory voting is suggested by the New York Independent. The argument is that if one has the right and omits to exercise it he shall, except in certain justifiable cases, be subject to some species of forfeitures, either of the right of suffrage for a given period or a pecuniary penalty. As the law compels men to serve as jurors it is contended that the voting service is not less important, and the citizen that will not exercise the right does not deserve to possess it. Of course the suggestion is not intended to extend to repeaters.

The following is from the Paris Kentuckian:

W. D. Hixson is a candidate for assessor of Mason county, an office for which he is well qualified. Mr. Hixson is one of the best historians of Kentucky, an accurate accountant and deserves the office to which he aspires. Our slight acquaintance with Mr. Hixson has predisposed us in his favor. Our oldest compositor, who was a companion of Hixson in the "Seven-Acre City" years ago, flourishes his beard and exclaims: "Viva Old Hix!" Mr. Hixson was a soldier in General Wheeler's command, and assisted in stealing more than a thousand wagons from the Confederates. Poor Hix, while battling in the Confederate service, received a Federal ball through one of his shoulders that daily reminds him of "Wheeler, the wagon stealer." Without disparaging the claims of any other candidate, we hope the election returns will show W. D. Hixson has been elected assessor of Mason county. He has furnished us many interesting historical items, and we hope to hear from him soon. He knows every trace, trail and hog path in Mason county.

Mr. Hixson is a candidate for assessor of Mayesville and not county assessor, though he would fill either office very creditably.

Card.

Mr. Wm. E. Stalup: If you will allow your name to be used at the January election as a candidate for councilman from the Fifth Ward, you will oblige your many friends and receive their hearty support. FIFTH WARD VOTERS.

To Check all Further Inquiries

regarding my candidacy for re-election to the city council I desire only to say that while I deeply appreciate the double honor intended to convey, I cannot, under any circumstances, consent to make the race, for the simple reason that time is not at my command to do justice to the good people of my ward. I therefore waive all claims to the office, hoping some more suitable man may be selected immediately and overwhelmingly elected in January next for the responsible position. Respectfully,

EDWARD MYALL.

Battle of Franklin.

MAYESVILLE, November 30, '93. Ed. Bulletin: Many of the readers of your valuable paper who, to-day will scan its columns, will doubtless be reminded of the hard fought battle of Franklin, Tenn. Nineteen years ago to-day that terrible battle was fought. All historians who have written of that battle coincide in the fact that it was one of the hardest battles fought during the war for the time it lasted. It is a strange fact that those who have written of that battle have little or nothing to say about the Kentucky soldiers, who so gallantly rushed forward without order to drive the enemy from our lines. To those who were not present at that eventful battle I would refer to Gen. J. D. Cox's "Franklin and Nashville," who will bear witness. True history will speak of Kentuckians as falling with their feet to the foe and their faces heavenward. Not so with some who turned their back to the foe on the first charge Hood made. Gen. Warner placed two brigades astride the Columbus pike, about a half mile in front of the main line, with order not to bring on an engagement but to watch the enemy and fall back should Hood make an advance. Contrary to order General Wagner opened fire on the enemy, thereby causing our lines to hold their fire to save our men, and gave the enemy an opportunity to be drawn in hot pursuit, and gaining the works at the Cotton Gin, when the two regiments in the front line gloriously fled. When, as General Cox says, "Neither Col. White commanding Reilly's second line, nor Col. Opdyce, waited for the word to charge, but were in motion before word could reach them." Col. White, being shot in the month and could not speak, holding his mouth with one hand, he pointed to the front with the other. The reader may ask who composed this "second line" Cox speaks of. I would answer, the 12th and 16th Ky. and 8th Tenn. As a proof of what Reilly's division achieved I will say it carried off as trophies twenty-two battle flags of the enemy, and Opdyce ten. The 16th Ky. also carried off the field a flag an Ohio regiment had deserted. These are stubborn facts, as hundreds of your readers will to-day bear witness. C. L. O.

I LOVED YOU SO!

[L. A. V.]

I love thee, dear, come back to me,
My weary heart cries out for thee,
To see thy soft eyes radiant smile,
With their old love-light, rare, divine,
And hear thy lips so tenderly
Speak low and lovingly to me—
My heart it cries with bitter pain,
For that will never occur again.

The blossoms, beautiful and sweet,
That you so often brought to greet
Me, with their beauty and perfume,
White roses, lilies, orange-blossoms,
And pansies, with their hearts of gold;
The blue they give is all untold.
Why brought you not to me the while
One lotus of the far-off Nile?

That I might eat it and forget
My loss of thee, the toll, the fret,
The cares of life: for I would cast
The memory of the far-off past
Away, for naught can bring to me
Thee, with thy voice of melody—
O Heaven above alone can know
I loved you so. I loved you so!

THE LORD CHIEF JUSTICE

As Written Down by the Burlington Man.

[R. J. Burdette.]

Well, Lord Coleridge, chief justice of England, is here. He is accompanied by his son Gil. His full name is Gilbert, but we always call him Gil. They expect to be the guests of the Burlington bar or boat club, they haven't decided which. The party came ashore in Elbridge Garry's yacht. Lord Coleridge is six feet old, about sixty years long, and shaves his face clean every day, including the Sabbath. His baggage was passed ashore without examination, under the disguise of luggage, a name applied to it by himself. He does not know much. He calls his valises "bags," and his trunks "boxes," and spoke of a baggage car as a "luggage van." He is not so intelligent as he looks. He was nearly choked to death at luncheon, by swallowing a large H, which he insisted on putting on his oyster, although he was told repeatedly that it wasn't him-tum to do so. On being showed a dude he remarked that he had committed several of them to the asylum for life just before leaving England. He had one of the best lay-outs for an extended lunch route ever organized on this continent, the banquets being located all the way from New York to Oregon, both in Canada and the United States.

His luggage was very much surprised on learning that the marquis of Lorne was not governor of the United States.

"Had we no governor, then?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," we said.

"And who was governor if the marquis was not?"

And we told him, Ben Butler. He was just about the governor's governor that ever governed, we said. And his luggage was pleased, and said he had never met Governor Butler, but had read his "Analogy" and "Life of Hudibras."

He said he had a letter of introduction to a man named Greeley, a reporter on some newspaper, he understood. After luncheon his luggage called a cab and ordered the driver to take him to Kansas, and was greatly disappointed on being told that the cab only ran as far as the Grand Central depot, and that Kansas was at least thirty-five miles out of the city. He expects to remain in this country three weeks. He would return to England to-morrow, but will be detained here somewhat longer, collecting material for a history of the United States, which he is going to write.

Bogus Modern Antiquities.

[London Standard.]

In the east the tourist has learned to look often before putting his hand in his pocket once. But he has no less reason to exercise caution when in localities where imposition might be less suspected. The steamer passenger who buys Paris-made gems at Colombo is a scoundrel among the Moormen of Ceylon; but there is just as much risk of buying corals at Honolulu which have been imported from the Marquesas for the gullibility of the home-coming colonists. In "the summer isles of Eden" the Chinese are already doing a fine business in old Hawaiian gods, necklaces, and other implements which "have been dug up in trenching the fields"—a statement quite accurate if it were only qualified by a saving clause telling how they had been buried there by their lucky finder. Demand creates supply, and accordingly we are not astonished to learn that in Fiji "genuine old cannibal folk" are now freely offered to unsuspicious voyagers, and that of late there has arisen a steady trade in human femora naved by cannibal Kanakas. The man who now accepts at any price maize and dahila bulbs "found in the mummy cave of Pharaoh's daughter" is hardly to be safely trusted with money; and surely, after the many warnings they have had, there ought not to be a great number of pious pilgrims who treasure up the Chinese scent-bottles "discovered in the pyramids," with verses on them from poems 2,000 years later than the avowed date of the flask.

But when a Peruvian or Mexican Indian offers an Inca or Aztec antiquity, is it not carrying skepticism to a stage when it ceases to be an archeologist's virtue to doubt its genuineness? Unfortunately, there are a few loads of Toltec gods and relics of sun worship for sale in Anahuac or Cuzco which are as veritable fabrications as the Deuteronomy which Mr. Shapira did not sell, or the pottery for which the Germans gave him £3,000, or the Samson's coffin—with the giant's name misspelled—which was introduced to the Palestine exploration fund as an unsophisticated relic. The foreign demand for "American antiquities" is now so great that one manufacturer in Indiana concentrates his attention chiefly on "mound builders' pipes." In Ohio a large business is done in hematite cells and forgets out from blue slate. In southern Illinois the knaves who make "prehistoric pottery" have so overdone the trade that it no longer pays; and, generally speaking, one has to be as careful in examining Indian relics as in skeptically scrutinizing the autographs, postage stamps, Judean shekels, and ancient Pentateuchs for sale in localities nearer home.

The "Satisfying" Preacher.

[New York Tribune.]

A clergyman in Tennessee is known as the "satisfying preacher." Whenever a church begins to grow tired of its regular pastor the "satisfying preacher" is sent for. And so atrociously bad is he that, after hearing him once or twice, the congregation is entirely "satisfied" to keep the pastor it has. A new avenue of usefulness is thus opened to poor preachers. They will act as a sort of counterpoise to those peripatetic preachers whose showy eloquence often causes a congregation to be dissatisfied with its humdrum pastor.

Bleaching by Electricity.

[New Orleans Picayune.]

Linen is now bleached by electricity. The discovery of uses to which electricity can be put has just commenced. In time it will come to make itself, and supply all the mechanical power in the world.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blisters, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores. "Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN." 148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1892.

All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brien, also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilde of 75 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.
